

Jeremie Averous

Project Management Consultant,
Author and Speaker

Jeremie Averous is a project management consultant, author, speaker, entrepreneur, trainer, and certified coach. He likes to describe himself as a K.E.E.N, a Knowledge Enhancing Exchanging Networker, a typical member of the new international nomadic leadership community.

Jeremie is passionate about helping people grow and about bringing teams of diverse people together to overcome seemingly impossible feats. He consults in the field of project management for large, complex projects, and spreads further the message of the Fourth Revolution through his blogging and speaking activities.

Jeremie has founded Project Value Delivery, a consulting company based in Singapore that "Empowers Organizations to be Reliably Successful in Executing Large, Complex Projects". The company is already set for high growth in the international market. Discover more on www.ProjectValueDelivery.com.

Jeremie likes to emphasize how leading large, complex projects is different from more straightforward projects. And he has coined the concept of "Project Soft Power", the essential personal and interpersonal disciplines of the successful project leader. The "Project Soft Power" book is due for publication mid-2012.

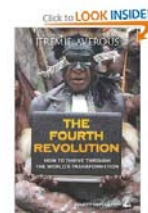

Jeremie is a dynamic speaker that loves to entertain and surprise his audience by jostling with contrarian ideas. You will not look at project management in the same way after one of Jeremie's talks.
